Last Sunday afternoon at Orchestra Hall, memorial services were held in honor of the late John P. Altgeld, who was born in Germany, December 30, 1847, raised in Mansfield, O., where his poor parents located on a small farm, upon landing in this country seeking fame and fortune, and dying at Joliet, Ill., March 12, 1902, after he had risen from working on the railroad tracks at $1.25 per day to Judge of the Superior Court of Cook County and up to Governor of the great State of Illinois.

The hall was filled from end to end and hundreds of people were turned away being unable to find standing room, more than five hundred of the most distinguished friends of the late Governor occupied the boxes and seats on the platform. Judge and Mrs. Edward F. Dunne, Judge and Mrs. Edward O. Brown, Miss Jane Addams, Bishop Samuel Fallows, Joseph A. O'Donnell, Mrs. John P. Altgeld, Mr. and Mrs. Waldemar Michelson, Judge and Mrs. M. L. McKinley, Editor Louis F. Post, State Senator Joseph P. Mahoney, Joseph S. Martin, Judge and Mrs. Dennis E. Sullivan, Hon. John E. Traeger, Henry Stuckert, William L. O'Connell, Frank J. Loesch, T. J. Scofield, J. J. Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Molner, Thomas Cusack and Miss Margaret Haley, were among those occupying seats in the boxes and on the platform the writer was also honored with a seat on the platform.

Daniel L. Cruick presided in a most able manner. Brilliant eulogies were delivered by Hons. Samuel Alschuler, Edward F. Dunne, William J. Bryan and Rev. Herbert S. Bigelow of Cincinnati, O., President of the Constitutional Convention of that state.

All the speakers were warmly received by the vast audience. Rev. Thomas E. Cox offered prayer at the beginning and at the close of the annual meeting to "keep alive the inspiring history of John P. Altgeld, volunteer soldier, jurist, statesman, publicist and humanitarian."

Under the directorship of Mr. Arthur Dunham, the music was furnished by the Sinai Temple choir, and at the conclusion of the sweet singing each lady member of the choir was presented with a huge bunch of American Beauty Roses.

The Hon. Samuel Alschuler, who was always a close friend and a warm admirer of John P. Altgeld, delivered the following oration at his memorial services, Sunday, March 10, 1912:

"It seems but yesterday, and not a decade, since our tears mingled with the soil that closed the new-made grave of John P. Altgeld."

"The intervening years have keenly felt the absence of his virile pen, his eloquent tongue and his forceful example. It cannot be said of him as of many others in history, that he lived too long for the good of his fame, or that he died under circumstances or just in time to rescue his name from oblivion."

"As his life was a constant devotion to humanity, and his existence a continuous self-sacrifice, his untimely death only cut short yet more devotion, and yet more sacrifice."

"Justice was his consuming passion; popular education his fondest hope, and corruption in public service his pet aversion. For the first he plead and strove and sacrificed; for the second he planned and wrought and builded; and against the last he inveighed and threatened and thundered."

in many humane enactments and changes in the law, and in the advocacy of many others. His enthusiasm for popular enlightenment, coupled with his great constructive genius, gave impetus to educational progress, and supplied vast addition to our educational facilities.

"The implacable foe of all evil practices in government, he boldly and fiercely grappled with the many-headed, many-tentacled monster of official corruption, and beat it, for a time at least, into subsidence, and compelled at least temporary release of its unholy grasp."

"He well realized that corruption of public servants is the greatest crime against the public welfare; that it eats, saps, corrodes and destroys the very foundations of our social system, and that unless curbed and arrested, the structure must fall, and our government must share the fate of those many others which have crumbled and disappeared as the result of corruption and official recreancy."

"Altgeld's call of the people to duty has not gone wholly undecided. The things for which he stood, oft times quite alone, have become the rallying centers of present thought—the rallying points of modern political action. While not, perhaps, the discoverer of great truths, he did more—he helped bring the people to a realizing sense of destructive conditions, and dangerous tendencies, which, though well known, were endured and tolerated because they had been all too common."

"His great task was not, and in the nature of things could not be and never can be completed. So long as men remain cast in their present mold, there will be justice to be upheld, equality among men to be maintained, vice and corruption to be combatted."

"These occasions would be indeed a mockery and a hypocrisy, a reflection upon, and not a loving tribute to him whose memory we honor, if the things he stood for did not find in ourselves more than mere passive approval, and high-sounding praise."

"Let us today truly and in good faith commemorate the life of this great exemplar of justice and equality among men, this foe of hypocrisy and corruption and greed, by dedicating ourselves to the cause of equal rights and justice, and of eternal, unyielding resistance to graft, corruption and all dishonest practices, by whatever name or in whatever form they may be manifested."

The Swedish-American Republican League of Illinois has endorsed state Senator Charles F. Hurburgh, for governor of this state, Senator Hurburgh is "The man who wrote the Two-cent-

HON. EDWARD D. GREEN.

Republican candidate for re-nomination at the primaries, Tuesday, April 9th and re-election to the legislature of Illinois from the 1st Senatorial district.

The Hon. Edward D. Green, is a candidate for re-nomination, subject to the will of the people at the primaries Tuesday April 9.

He is a man who has done things and should be re-nominated and elected. His brilliant record as a legislator speaks eloquently in his behalf. He deserves the support of every voter in his district.

The campaign of vituperation, falsehoods, and abuse waged by his enemies, proves the desperate straits they are in, for they certainly cannot advance the interest of their candidate by making misleading statements, and urging Mr. Green's success as a reason why he should be defeated.

For what we want is a successful man to represent us. One who has not made a success himself, certainly cannot represent the race.

We want a man in the Legislature who is not poverty stricken and is far removed from temptation or graft. One who will work and hustle for the race at Springfield and not for himself. That he holds a position, is successful, and works honestly for a living

The office as a member of the legislature is in a great measure honorary as everybody knows. What our contemporary failed to state, perhaps with malicious intent. Out of the small sum paid members of the house they must pay their incidental traveling expenses, living both at Springfield and here, to say nothing of campaign expenses. It is common report if a member who is honest at the end of his term saves the price of a neck tie, he has done well. In most cases they run behind. That our legislators are under paid everybody knows. If a man is honest and we would preserve his usefulness, we must keep him beyond temptation. It is folly to advance the theory, because a man is a member of the House of Representatives he must cease his activities. Let him work, practice his profession, or conduct his business.

What we are interested in, is not what he honestly works for, but has
